Clinical Writing: Expanding the Parameters

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 2021 | 9:00 AM – 1:00 PM

Practitioners and General Public: $80 | Students: Free

4 CE credits for Licensed Psychoanalysts and Social Workers

In this workshop, participants will learn to write richer, more accessible, and creative clinical narratives, including vignettes, case studies, and clinical papers. We will explore how clinical writing can more faithfully capture the depth and breadth of the emotional life of psychoanalytic treatments. An important aim will be to open our writing up not only to the subjectivity of the patient but also to that of the psychoanalyst or psychotherapist as both unfold in the clinical process. Through writing exercises, participants will write their own clinical narratives, with a focus on expanding the parameters of traditional clinical writing.

Therese Ragen, PhD, is a graduate and faculty member of the New York University Postdoctoral Program in Psychotherapy and Psychoanalysis, where she has taught courses on Ferenczi and contemporary psychoanalysis, relational theory, and clinical writing. Her writing has appeared in the literary journals Northwest Review, The Texas Review, and The Palo Alto Review, as well as in Contemporary Psychoanalysis. Her book The Consulting Room and Beyond: Psychoanalytic Work and its Reverberations in the Analyst's Life was published by Routledge in 2009.

On the Analyst's Shame

FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 2021 | 7:30 – 9:30 PM

Practitioners and General Public: $40 | Students: Free

2 CE credits for Licensed Psychoanalysts and Social Workers

Although it is common to discuss the dynamics of a patient's shame, what is often not discussed is the analyst's shame, which remains secret and taboo. Doing so would reveal vulnerability and risk the judgment of others, yet it is the very thing we encourage in the consulting room. When shame is evoked in the analyst, it brings the analyst's own developmental history into the transference-countertransference matrix. It can affect praxis and the treatment frame, altering the course and boundaries of the therapeutic alliance. The intense emotions may be almost unbearable, partly because the analyst feels it would be inappropriate to share them with the patient. Mills discusses the shame he experienced when idealized by a child patient who felt deep shame about having been physically abused, which resonated with the analyst's own abuse history. The evoked feelings led to an intervention that was interactive and paternal, helping the patient to transcend his idealization of the analyst.

Jon Mills, PsyD, PhD, ABPP, is a Canadian philosopher, psychoanalyst, and clinical psychologist. He is on the faculty of the Adelphi University Postgraduate Programs in Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy and is Emeritus Professor of Psychology and Psychoanalysis at the Adler Graduate Professional School in Toronto. The recipient of numerous awards for his scholarship, including four Gradiva Awards, he is the author and/or editor of 25 books. In 2015 he was given the Otto Weininger Memorial Award for lifetime achievement by the Canadian Psychological Association. He runs a mental health corporation in Ontario.

Some Observations on the Psychodynamics of Race, Caste, Class, and Ethnic Differences in the Analytic Dyad

FRIDAY, MAY 7, 2021 | 7:30 – 9:30 PM

Practitioners and General Public: $40 | Students: Free

2 CE credits for Licensed Psychoanalysts and Social Workers

Annie Lee Jones explores the shifting meanings of racialized experiences in the psychoanalytic dyad as differences along the lines of caste, class, race, and ethnicity emerge in the treatment. These differences are not just between people of different races—there are caste, class, and ethnic variations within the blackness or whiteness of analyst and analysand—and they are often projected or denied, providing rich material for exploration. Their complexity affects the transference-countertransference matrix in multiple ways.

Annie Lee Jones, PhD, is a clinical psychologist and psychoanalyst in private practice in Queens, New York. She is co-chair of the Committee on Ethnicity, Race, Culture, Class, and Language (CERCCL) at the New York University Postdoctoral Program in Psychotherapy and Psychoanalysis, where she is also a faculty member in the Independent Track. She is a fellow and training analyst at the Institute for Psychoanalytic Training and Research (IPTAR), where she has taught a course on black psychoanalytic writers, and is on the faculties of the Adelphi University Postgraduate Program in Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy Trauma Treatment Certificate Program and The Stephen Mitchell Relational Study Center. She also works as a clinical psychologist and is the Military Sexual Trauma Coordinator at the St. Albans Community Living Center of the US Department of Veterans Affairs New York Harbor Healthcare System, where she runs a telehealth clinic for individual and group psychotherapy. She is a founding member of Black Psychoanalysts Speak (BPS).

Transference and the Moment of Catastrophe

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 2021 | 9:30 – 11:30 AM

Practitioners and General Public: $40 | Students: Free

2 CE credits for Licensed Psychoanalysts and Social Workers

During this pandemic there have been catastrophic moments for many of us. A specific form of transference has been observed in the moment of catastrophe when time stops and speech becomes impossible. Davoine will present examples of this phenomenon, taken from the testimony of anesthesiologists and nurses working on the front lines, and will compare them with the "forward psychotherapy" devised for the treatment of victims of shell shock in World War I, which was the prototype of modern practice with traumatized patients.

Françoise Davoine, PhD, is a psychoanalyst in private practice in Paris. She trained in the École Freudienne de Paris, founded by Jacques Lacan, and was a member of that school until Lacan's death and the school's dissolution. She worked for thirty years as a psychoanalyst in public psychiatric hospitals in France as an external consultant. She was a professor for forty years at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales (EHESS), where she and Jean-Max Gaudillière led a weekly seminar entitled "Madness and the Social Link" at the Center for the Study of Social Movements. She was an Erikson Scholar at Austen Riggs Center in the summer of 2017. She is the author of many articles and books, including History Beyond Trauma with Jean-Max Gaudillière (Other Press, 2004), Wittgenstein's Folly (YBK, 2012), Mother Folly (Stanford University Press, 2014), Fighting Melancholia: Don Quixote's Teaching (Karnac, 2016), A Word to the Wise: Don Quixote Returns to Fight Perversion with Jean-Max Gaudillière (Karnac, 2018).

Distance Learning Class

Traumatic Experiences of Normal Development: A Trauma-Based Listening Perspective

MONDAYS, FEBRUARY 1 – APRIL 26, 2021

1:00 – 2:30 PM (Eastern)

Tuition: $500

15 CE credits for Licensed Psychoanalysts and Social Workers

This course presents psychoanalytic perspectives on the treatment of trauma. The reconstruction of object relations, an integration with intersubjectivity, and somatization are addressed in light of a redefinition of trauma. Various kinds of traumatic events are examined in terms of their roots in normal development and their role in the etiology of difficulties such as depression, anxiety, addictions, and eating disorders and their contribution to the formation of character structure and relationship style. Therapeutic approaches based on the instructor's trauma-based listening perspective (SAO/TEND) will be emphasized.

Carl H. Shubs, PhD, is a psychologist in private practice in Beverly Hills, CA. He has written several books on trauma and its treatment, with a focus on his SAO/TEND psychoanalytic perspective, including Traumatic Experiences of Normal Development: An Intersubjective, Object Relations Listening Perspective on Self, Attachment, Trauma, and Reality (Routledge, 2020). He has also published several articles on the treatment of trauma.
